Co-sponsored by Native American Studies, Religion, Latin American Studies and Sociology & Anthropology

David Carrasco will give an illustrated lecture comparing two types of violence associated with the foundations of the Americas and the so-called “conquest of Mexico.” On the one side, we will review the cosmovision and ritual practices of human sacrifice in the Aztec capital of Tenochtitlan with emphasis on the perfect male body and the feast of the flaying of men. On the other side, we will use descriptions from Carrasco’s recently published The History of the Conquest of New Spain to review the theology and political violence of Hernan Cortes’ army against Maya and Aztec warriors, women, and children.

Students will be asked to compare and contrast these two cultural orientations and practices of ritual killing.

Ritual Sacrifice Among Aztecs and Spaniards in the Conquest of Mexico

David Carrasco will give an illustrated lecture comparing two types of violence associated with the foundations of the Americas and the so-called “conquest of Mexico.” On the one side, we will review the cosmovision and ritual practices of human sacrifice in the Aztec capital of Tenochtitlan with emphasis on the perfect male body and the feast of the flaying of men. On the other side, we will use descriptions from Carrasco’s recently published The History of the Conquest of New Spain to review the theology and political violence of Hernan Cortes’ army against Maya and Aztec warriors, women, and children.

Students will be asked to compare and contrast these two cultural orientations and practices of ritual killing.

Monday, November 8

4:30 P.M.

ALANA Center

Reception to follow

Co-sponsored by Native American Studies, Religion, Latin American Studies and Sociology & Anthropology